Addiction became an important and perplexing issue, research psychologist as well as policy makers in India in the last decade. Research efforts were focused on identifying the chain characteristics, personality and psycho-social variables related to the addict earlier investigations in India and a broad have indicated that these could underlie addiction to drugs, researches in west have indicated that there are sub-groups among addicts i.e. addicts who use drugs for different purposes and have different personality types. (Berzins, Ross, English & Holey, 1971, cring & Olsm, 1988 and Roith crocker & craj 1977). The most interesting observation is that not all addict and his response to treatment? This question is has been raised by many investigators. (Mathan-1988) Does this relate why do some addicts relapsed while other are rehabilitated ?

The addicts under go treatment and detoxification and within a short period some are back on drugs. Relapsed are a problem for those who work with addicts. Researches conducted so far have indicated that along with personality, other variables such as friends influence, social pressures, stresses etc. are also related to relapses. Brown (1971), reported influence of friends, relief from personal problems and easy availability as reason for relapsed in heroin addicts. Marlatt (1989) also reported that relapsed occur in the company of other drug users. Kroll (1987) in a factor analytic study on a sample of Malaysian addicts also reported in fluence of friends and family problems as important factor in relapses.

The queries on which are study was bases were as follows:

1. Do more relapsed addicts have association with other addicts as
